

Past Perfect

- The Future Perfect Formula

The formula for the past perfect tense is pretty simple: had + past participle. Also, there is the continuous form of this tense whose formula is: had + been + ing form. It doesn't matter if the subject of your sentence is singular or plural, either way, the formula doesn't change.

- Function

- For an action was completed at some point in the past before something else happened. For example: You had studied English before you moved to New York.
- For something that started in the past and continued up to a given time in the past. For example: She didn't want to move. She had lived in Liverpool all her life. In such cases, we normally use the past perfect continuous. For example: She didn't want to move. She had been living in Liverpool all her life.
- For something we had done several times up to a point in the past. For example: He had met the president three times before he went to the war.
- When we're reporting our experience up to a certain point in the past. For example: My eighteenth birthday was the best day I had ever had.
- For something that happened in the past, and its effects were important later on, at another point in the past. For example: I couldn't get in the house. I had lost my keys.

- How to make the Past Perfect Negative

Making a negative past perfect construction is easy! Just insert not after had. For example: We had not eaten breakfast before we got out.

- How to Ask a Question

The formula for asking a question in the past perfect tense is had + subject + past participle. For example: Had you eaten breakfast before you got out?
